

2020 U.S. Home Prices: A Bright Spot in a Dark Year

Radian | January 20, 2021

The Radian HPI data recently revealed the full picture of 2020, which was a record-breaking year at the national, regional and metro level. "In the end, there was nothing typical about 2020," noted Steve Gaenzler, SVP of Data and Analytics. "As the country shut down in March, no one predicted what would happen over the remainder of the year. Despite a global pandemic, social unrest at levels not seen in generations, and a divisive political environment, the U.S. housing market thrived."

High Prices and Low Inventory Changing the SFR Market

REI-Ink | January 4, 2021

The 2020 market for single family rentals (SFR) was buffeted by changing preferences and grim market realities. That did not put a halt on activity. On the contrary, low rates and available liquidity meant a very active year in SFRs for owners and lenders alike. Not only did the market see a record-breaking number of securitizations completed during the year, but it also saw the largest securitization ever to come to market—more than 14,000 assets—successfully close in 2020.
